TOP 3 FALL DISHES TO TRY IN SF RIGHT NOW

1. Roasted Squash Bowl at Che Fico

Local fans and dedicated foodies may already be familiar with Che Fico, but this season they're bringing seasonal specials to the table that you won't want to miss. Our favorite fall dish from David Nayfeld and his team is made from roasted butternut squash and seasoned with maple roasted chestnuts, Liwa cheese, and crispy sage. It's fashioned like a bread bowl, but without the bread - a roasted round of Red Kuri squash acts as a vessel for these delicious local ingredients, courtesy of nearby Full Belly Farm and KJ Orchards. It's a sophisticated take on a cozy classic.

2. McFarland Springs Trout Ceviche at The Anchovy Bar

You could just as easily visit The Anchovy Bar to try one of their namesake salted-fish dishes, but seeing as local California anchovies are out of season, we recommend trying their innovative ceviche instead. This brand new dish is quickly garnering a fanbase, especially among health-conscious foodies. Why? The Bar's chefs use locally-raised trout from Two X Sea, which have more Omega 3s than Salmon. They're also delicious. Don't just take our word for it - The Anchovy Bar was recently featured as one of the 11 Best New Restaurants in America by Eater.

3. Truffle Duck Fried Rice at Palette Tea House

Yep, this dish is exactly what it sounds like - a warmed-up, gourmet take on fried rice from some of the Bay's foremost Dim Sum experts. Palette House has gathered even more loyal fans after providing DIY "steam at home" dim-sum kits to locals throughout the pandemic. Though this dish appears to boast an unlikely pairing of ingredients, chefs all over the world recommend combining umami flavors (like those present in typical fried rice dishes) with fresh truffles to bring out their woodier notes.
